THE WINDIEST CITY.

There Are Four Cities That Are Breezier Than Chicago.

"Chicago is supposed to be the windiest city in the country," said an observant man, according to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but it depends on how you mean it, as to whether it is or not. Windy is a broad word. Some times it does not mean simply a matter of weather. Men are windy now and then, and if you don't believe it, I would like to introduce you to some friends of mine. But I was thinking about a statement I found in a Chicago paper recently. Taking the year 1898 on the wind proposition, it says: 'In New York the highest velocity for the month of January was 61.14 miles per hour; February, 48.13; March, 33.11; November, 65.18; December, 78.17; highest for the year, 78.17. The figures for Buffalo in 1898 were: Highest for January, 68 miles per hour; February, 48; March 60; November, 68; December, 68; highest for the year, 68. In Chicago the highest for January, 1898, was 66.18 miles per hour; February, 48.19; March, 62.18; November, 76.21; December, 47.20; highest for the year, 76.21. But it appears that 1898 was an unusually windy year in Chicago.

"In 1899 the figures for New York were: Highest for January, 66.15; February, 64.17; March, 80.19; November, 56.13; December, 64.17; highest for the year, 80.19. Buffalo: Highest for January, 72.20; February, 60.16; March, 66.17; November, 44.13; December, 64.20; highest for the year, 72.20. Chicago: Highest for January, 52.20; February, 48.18; March, 58.18; November, 48.17; December, 56.18; highest for the year, 60. Figures for other years show that Chicago is sometimes ahead of Buffalo and New York, but more often below them in the matter of wind velocity. A table of wind figures compiled by Prof. Willis L. Moore, of the United States weather department, shows that the average hourly velocity of the wind at various stations and covering a number of years is as follows: Boston, 11 miles; Buffalo, 11; Cleveland, 9; New York, 9; Philadelphia, 10; St. Louis, 11; Chicago, 9.

"Here it is seen that, taking the year round, St. Louis, Buffalo, Boston and Philadelphia are windier than Chicago, while this city, New York and Cleveland have an even thing of it as far as breeziness is concerned. The highest velocity ever reported at Buffalo was 90 miles an hour, at New York 80, at St. Louis 80, and at Chicago 84. At North Platte, Neb., a velocity of 96 miles an hour has been reported. It is worthy of mention that Chicago's highest winds do not blow from the water, as they do in Buffalo, and are likely to in New York. Also wind that blows from salt water is supposed to be much more penetrating than the breeze that sweeps across a prairie. Taking these facts into consideration, it seems that Chicago, meteorologically at least, is not the windiest city on earth, though it has a good record in this respect."

A TRINITY OF DANGERS.

Immorality, Indifferentism and Fanaticism Are Republic's Foes.

The trinity of dangers which the republic has to fear are immorality, indifferentism, and fanaticism, says James M. Buckley, in Century. Immorality produces one or the other, according to temperament. Unfortunately, in the body politic, indifferentism and fanaticism do not antidote each other. The one is dry rot; the other combustion and swift destruction. Men who love their country enough to be glad to serve it, and are wise enough to steady it; who honor the law, and therefore are careful what laws they enact; men who can hasten ultra-conservatives without losing their hold upon them, and are able to check fanatics without driving them to riotous extremes; men who discern where reform ends and destruction begins, who wish to possess only what they can assimilate and beneficially govern—these in each generation can save the state, and these only.

Russian railways are the most dangerous in the world. Thirty-one persons in every million passengers are either killed or hurt.

CAREERS OF OUR NOTABLES.

Shows How the College Athlete Fares in Practical Life.

What is the value of college athletic honors in winning distinction in life? To put the question in another way: What sort of college career has turned out the greatest number of notable men?

The answer to this question, says the New York World has been figured out by a clever statistician and is a curiosity. All the men in America who have achieved professional or commercial distinction are represented by a paragraph or two of biography in "Who's Who in America."

From the information contained in this book it has been found that men who took honors in special subjects at college number one in five of American notables, while men who were among the first seventh in the general courses represent only one in seven. In fact, the proportion among the men with special honors is nearly equal to that of the first four scholars, although there are five times as many special honor men turned out.

A man who graduates from college with highest honors in a special subject, according to the statistics, has an extraordinarily good chance of making his mark in the world. Either such a course is a better preparation for a career or a better test of ability than the general course.

On the other hand, the record of the college athlete who is always such a conspicuous figure at college, shows that he attains a high place in after life but seldom compared with the successful scholar. The chance of distinction for members of the rowing crew is no better than the average student, though there is a rather better chance for their captains.

But the chances for the baseball and football men are lower still, according to the records of the past. They seldom receive high places in scholarship and more seldom still appear in "Who's Who."

A REMARKABLE LETTER.

Composed Largely of Words Ordinary Readers Have Never Seen.

The number of obsolete words that are to be found in a complete dictionary of the English language is considerably larger than people have any idea of. The following letter, written by an alleged poet to an editor who had treated his poetry with derision, says London Tit-Bits, furnishes some idea of them:

"Sir: You have behaved like an impetiginous scrogle! Like those who, envious of any moral celsitude, carry their ungacity to the height of creating symposiologically the fecund words which my polymathic genius uses with uberty to abligate the tongues of the weetless! Sir, you have crassly parodied my own pet words, though they were trigrams!

"I will not coarsenate reproaches—I will oduse a veil over the atramental ingratitude which has chamfered even my indiscerpible heart. I am silent on the focillation which my coadjuvancy must have given when I offered to become your fantor and adminicle. I will not speak of the lippitude, the oblespy you have shown in exacerbating me, one whose genius you should have approached with mental discalcation. So I tell you, without supervacaneous words, nothing will render ignoscible your conduct to me.

"I warn you that I would velligate your nose if I thought that any moral diarthrosis thereby could be performed—if I thought I should not impugnorate my reputation. Go! tachygraphic scogle, band with your crass iniquinate fantors; draw objections from the thought, if you can, of having synchronically lost the ex-istimation of the greatest poet since Milton!"

And yet all these words are to be found in the dictionary!

Prizes for Regularity.

A Devonshire school has hit on a novel plan for securing the regular attendance of its scholars. Periodically those children whose attendance is most satisfactory are grouped together and photographed, to the envy of those not included. Copies of the photograph are distributed to the subjects, and the plan works out admirably.
